

PhD-workshop with visiting professor Fazal Rizvi from Melbourne University on "Education, Globalization and Imagination - imagined futures, scales, and economies in studies of projects concerned with education" , Tuesdays, October 7 and 14, 2014 at

Aarhus University Copenhagen Campus (IUP/DPU in Emdrup)

Deadline for registration: September 26th. Submission of one page project description by: October 3rd.

Fazal Rizvi is a Professor in Education at the University of Melbourne and a fellow of the Australia India Institute. He joined the Melbourne in July 2010 from the University of Illinois at Urbana Champaign, where he directed the Global Studies in Education program. Much of professor Rizvi's recent research has focused on issues of identity, culture, global mobility of students; and theories of globalization and the internationalization of higher education. His current projects include an examination of the ways in which Indian universities are negotiating pressures of globalization and the knowledge economy, as well as a more theoretical exploration of the cosmopolitan possibilities of education. His recent books include: Youth Moves: Identities and Education in a Global Era (Routledge 2007), (Routledge 1996), Globalization and the Study of Education (Wiley 2009), Globalizing Educational Policy (Routledge 2010), Encountering Education in the Global (Routledge 2014). Professor Rizvi will be visiting Department of Education at Aarhus University as a MALLL fellow October 1-18, 2014.

Workshop outline:

Built around Professor Rizvi's writing the workshop will focus on the social imaginaries of globalization and the knowledge economy and their links to education policy.

The first session, (October 7, 14.30 – 16.30 in room D165) is a public lecture by Professor Rizvi entitled 'The rise of Asian Higher Education'.

Prior to the second session, a one-day workshop, participants are asked to write and circulate a short project description relating their material and projects to Professor Rizvi's ideas and vocabulary about 'social imaginaries' concerning globalization and education.

The second session - one-day workshop (October 14, 9.30-16.15 in room D217) - will begin with a presentation by Professor Rizvi detailing the concept of social imaginaries and its application in the study of educational projects in an age concerned with globalization.

This will be followed by a series of student presentations where each will be questioned and critiqued by a peer student with the help of professor Rizvi. The workshop will end in a concluding session, which based on the discussion of student projects will draw up key methodological and conceptual practices for engaging with the implications of imagined futures, scales, and economies in studies of projects concerned with education.

Students will prepare for the workshop through the reading of chapters 12-14 in Rizvi's recent book, 'Encountering Education in the Global' (Routledge 2014) and 'Rethinking "Brain Drain" in the Era of Globalisation' (Asia Pacific Journal of Education 25 (2): 175-192 – 2005), the circulation of and reading of project descriptions, and their participation in the public lecture on October 7. Participation will be limited to 9 PhD.-students, but the workshop will be kept open for interested postgraduate students, IUP PhD-students without paper, and other faculty at IUP.

Participation in the workshop is free, but you have to register here: https://auws.au.dk/Professor_Fazal_Rizvi_workshop

The places in the work shop will be allotted based on the order of registration.
