

Silence and Knowledge:

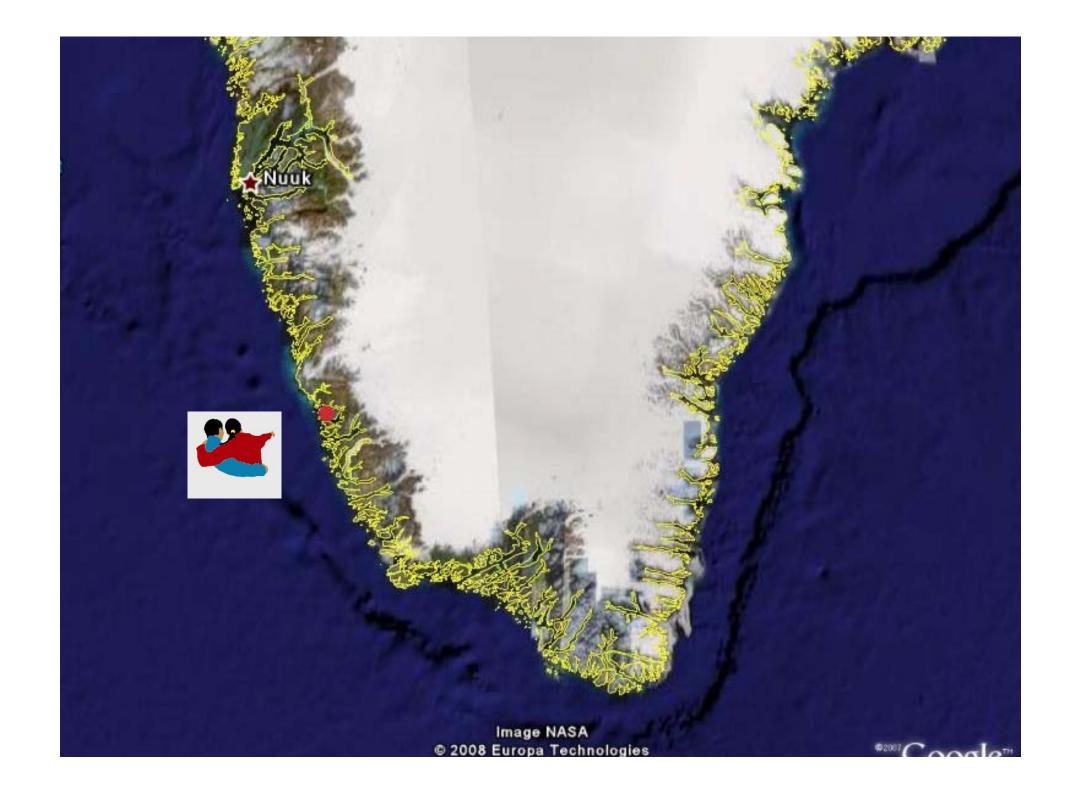

Research on Silence as Marginalization or Connectedness

Funded by Bikkuben Foundation, Sermersoog Kommunegarfik and Greenland Self Rule,

El silencio es un mar, la palabra es un río. (Jalaludin Rumi : Mathnawi, IV.)

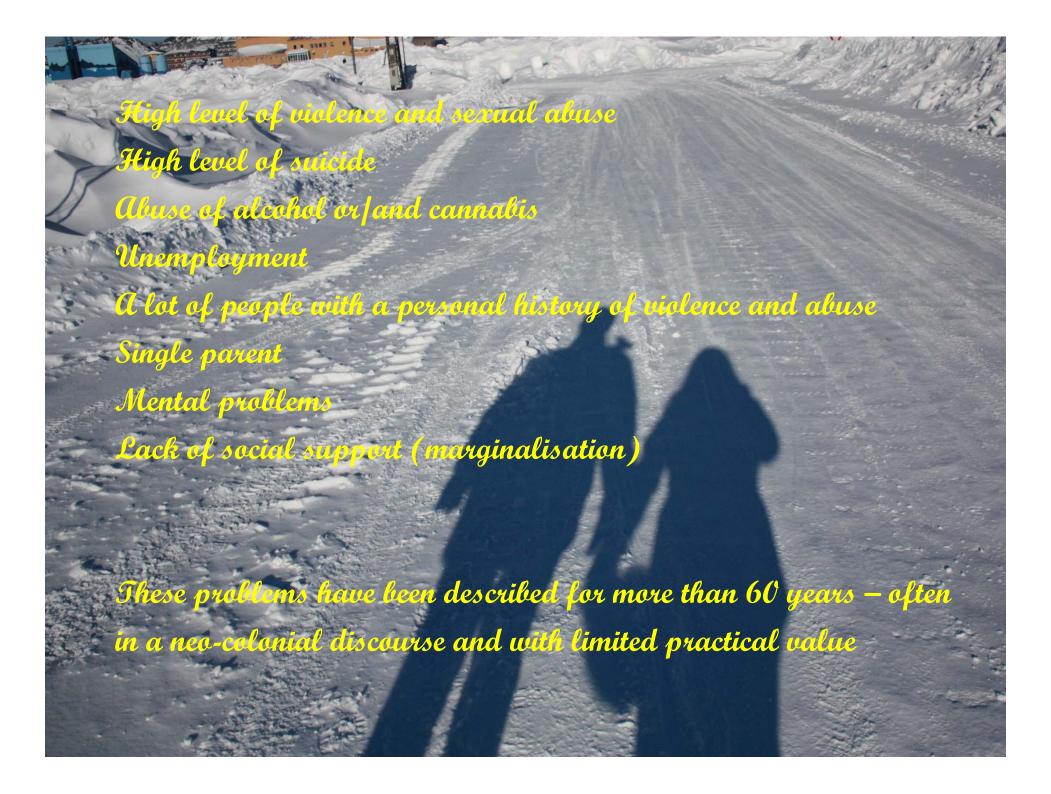

Alcohol consumption per capita, 2000-2005

X

> Alcohol consumption among adults (age 15+) in litres per capita:

- > Moldova 18.22
- > Czech Republic 16.45
- > Hungary 16.27
- > Russia 15.76
- > Ukraine 15.60
- > Estonia 15.57
- > Andorra 15.48
- > Romania 15.30
- > Slovenia 15.19

Belarus 15.13

Croatia 15.11

Lithuania 15.03

South Korea 14.80

Portugal 14.55

Ireland 14.41

France 13.66

United Kingdom 13.37

Denmark 13.37. (Greenland 13.00)

Silence as marginalization:

In this town a lot of people - children as well as grownups - seem to hide behind a mask. They feel that they have nobody to talk to and that they are all alone with their problems - and that they are the only ones with problems

It's like the air in this town is quite stuffy. You dare not to say that you have problems. You fear that all the worst will happen if you speak openly about problems.

A culture of silence – silence as avoidance and protection

- > Fear of expressing one's opinion exists in the local community.
- According to the youth, expressing an opinion which others disagree with may result in social exclusion.
- > This is in line with findings by Kirmayer, Hayton, Malus, Jimenez, Dufour, Quesney, Ternar, Yu, & Ferrara (1994), (with Inuit in Canada), that talking about problems among Inuit is often avoided.
- > We saw several examples of youth laughing at each other and mocking each other during interviews.

Breaking the culture of silence

> - Good parenthood requires that we can talk openly about happiness and sorrows. We must have a dialogue about daily tasks and decisions. We must actively create love and togetherness and mutual understanding. This is how support and attachment are created.

Silence as connectedness?

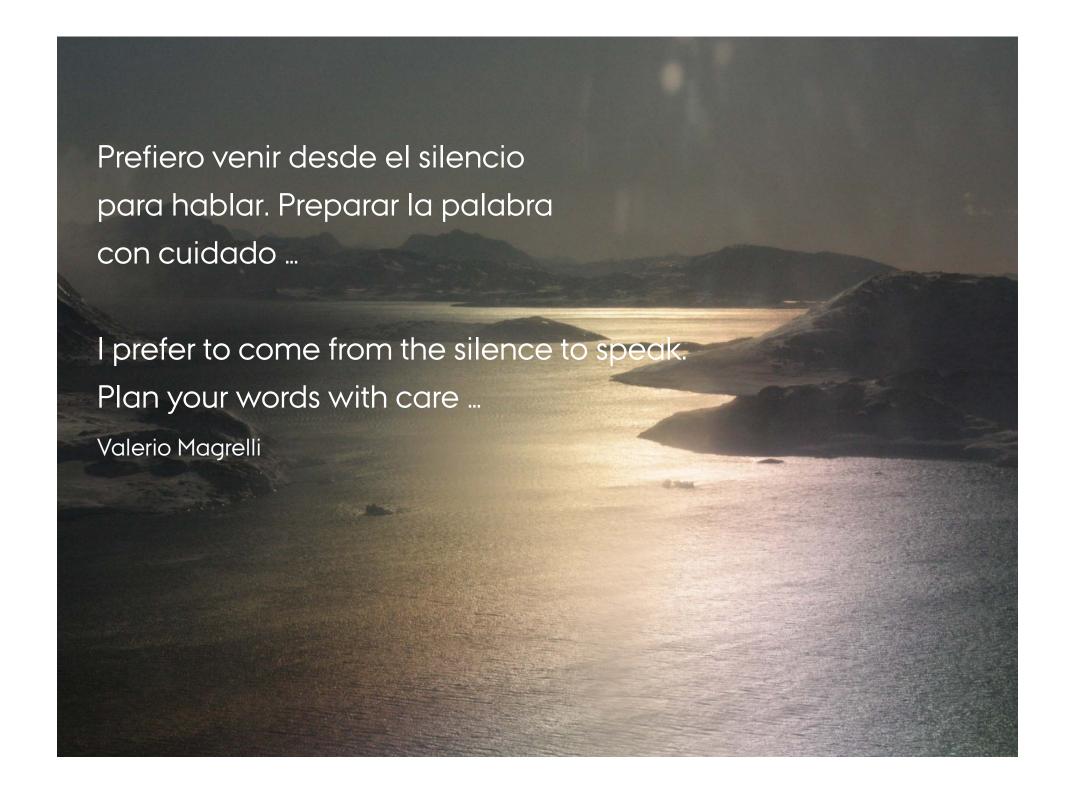

What are the young people building with their silence(s) – what do they want to make untouchable? – this question in itself opens for new meanings (metaphors).

How to approximate to silence a word that may give existence to silence without explaining it but showing it in a new form?

(Sarah Cohen)

The passion for understanding and describing may destroy any difference, and may close the open space, so no progress can be made. The silence may be a space, an effort, an investment, a work, an active act of creation - from which new words can emerge.

Silences

- > Silence as emptiness absence
- > Silence as symbol suspension (of meaning).
- > Silence as replacement of a word it replaces a word that will not be said (but is understood from the silence).
- > Silence as admiration to be flabbergasted it can only be pronounced by silence.
- > As commemorative silence
- > Silence as a sign of the unspeakable indicates a presence or a lived situation that cannot be translated into words.
- > Silence as a source of wisdom
- > Silence as closeness to God
- > Silence of the hunter
- > Silence as modesty and giving space for others to speak

Research

- > To listen to the silence and to understand it as silences and as something which can open for surprise(s) in our understanding.
- > To listen to the young peoples own understanding(s) when they want to share.
- > To let the language of research and the poetic connectedness of silence touch each other without killing the silence in the process.
- > To study the impact of different approaches to the silence as the silence cannot be studied in itself without breaking it -
- > The only approach is to listen respectfully, also to the silence (and that is what PA is doing - they are learning from the young people and they be in silence with the young people) and to study the impact of the silence.

Wishes of the young people

X

To be in the nature - Sport (soccer, skating, fitness, skiing, etc.) - Internet access - Shops and a cinema - A shared boat owned by the local authorities – Demolish

the old apartment buildings Team-building (promoting mutual trust) - Training for more self-confidence - ...

A conclusion – or a starting point?

- > Response of quietness or non-confrontation (by saying "I don't know" or walking away) may thus be seen as connectedness to something else – can be a value of respect or modesty.
- > In some cases it is a way of avoiding talking about worries.
- > Silence is a value and a resource, when it is a competence of being connected to others, to the environment, or to values.
- > To study these dimensions of the silence without breaking it that is our challenge now -

Qujannaq @ - Thank you @ - Gracias @

